Learning & Development

Fostering curiosity - developing understanding (No 9)

Although troubling times are upon us and the future remains unclear, we can be certain that normality will return in due course. In the meantime, the opportunity is before us to take on board some Masonic Learning and use the time to develop our Masonic knowledge and even improve or add to our ritual base whilst not actively engaged in lodge and chapter activities.

Our on-line resource SOLOMON provides us with a wealth of information designed not only to explain our freemasonry but also to add in-depth knowledge to those many often-asked questions that we never seem to have time to delve into.

With the introduction of sound files within SOLOMON, our learning experience is enhanced by the spoken word coming across in a calm and measured tone along with papers and nuggets to read on a range of Masonic subjects covering every degree in the Craft, each degree being covered via different modules with additional modules on Lodge matters, Masonic history and Royal Arch Chapter subjects.

With social media such a part of our lives in these modern times, you can read interesting nuggets and articles on Facebook, articles which will lead you to greater knowledge of our Craft and inspire you to learn more about our freemasonry. You can read the posts and receive notifications and follow the links to the articles at <https://www.facebook.com/SolomonUGLE>

Equally you can use your Twitter account to read and receive notifications at @SolomonUGLE; yet another excellent tool enabling you to receive a 'daily advancement in Masonic knowledge'.

For those with a deeper interest in Masonic research we are well blessed with sources available in our own Museum of Freemasonry <https://museumfreemasonry.org.uk> located in Great Queens Street available to us for a range of research purposes. If your interest is in Provincial or lodge history a full set of materials can be found at <http://www.hantsandiwprovincialhistory.co.uk/>

We may not be meeting together at present but we can add to our daily advancement in Masonic knowledge preparing us for the inevitable return to our lodges, equipped with knowledge and understanding gained during this quiet period. Why not share your questions and quizzes on lodge Whatsapp groups as a good means of communicating and learning together.

Where will you find the information you need? Go to <https://solomon.ugle.org.uk>
